Top 15 Employer Prospects

Jonesboro, Paragould and the Northeast Arkansas manufacturing/distribution corridor | Research checked October 12, 2026

These are researched employer candidates, not confirmed staffing buyers. Public job listings and employer scale do not prove that a company uses an agency, accepts a new supplier, or has a temporary labor requirement. No business was contacted.

How the ranking works

The first 14 accounts have role-family evidence on the Paragould economic-development jobs page, which describes its listings as regularly updated. Unilever has an employer-posted Jonesboro machine-operator listing with multiple shifts, but it is explicitly a full-time direct-hire opening. These are useful reasons to ask about contingent coverage, not grounds to claim a staffing need. Smaller local operations appear early because a local decision path may be easier to identify; this is a qualification hypothesis, not a confirmed procurement fact.

The agency's service area, role mix, screening, payroll/employer model, insurance, pricing, and client record are not known. Do not promise capabilities until those are confirmed.

A useful first wave

After confirming which roles the agency can safely and reliably recruit, start with ARCOT, FABCO, Allen Engineering, Cupples Sign, and Laubach Logistics. Those accounts have visible local role signals. Ask whether the listed role is current, whether it is direct hire only, and whether any temporary coverage or volume need exists. Do not send candidates or quote a rate until the client confirms supplier access and the job-order details.

A practical 30-day outreach sequence

This schedule is an activity plan, not a sales forecast. The objective is to confirm agency fit and identify a real, economically viable job order before recruiting against it.

Days 1-3 | Prepare

Complete the agency capability sheet: service area, worker types, screening, payroll/employer-of-record model, insurance, safety process, hours of coverage, and references the owner is authorized to share. Pick only the role types she can actually fill. Re-check the P1 postings. Prepare a one-page agency overview and a blank job-order intake.

Days 4-10 | Local P1 test

Call ranks 1-5: ARCOT, FABCO, Allen Engineering, Cupples Sign, and Laubach Logistics. Ask for HR, the site/operations manager, or the owner responsible for temporary labor. Laubach is conditional on verified CDL/insurance capability. Log the answer, supplier path, actual need, and next step.

Days 11-17 | Production and project roles

Call ranks 6-10: Delta Asphalt, Nunn's Construction, Martin Sprocket & Gear, KNL Holdings, and GRT Rubber. Qualify seasonality, project/shift coverage, role requirements, safety duties, insurance, and site onboarding before promising candidates.

Days 18-24 | Larger plants

Call ranks 11-15: Prysmian, Utility Trailer, Anchor Packaging, Greenbrier, and Unilever. Begin by asking whether the site takes new staffing suppliers and who owns vendor onboarding. Expect longer procurement and safety review cycles. Do not send resumes before permission and process are clear.

Days 25-30 | Close the loop

Follow up once with contacts who invited it, deliver only information requested, and open discovery on any real job order. If there is no P1 fit, screen up to five P2 accounts from the workbook for the agency's confirmed role specialty. Record disqualified accounts and revisit only when the trigger changes.

Track these outcomes

Record dials, live decision-maker conversations, confirmed contingent-labor policy, approved-vendor next step, qualified job orders, projected bill rate and direct cost, and agreed follow-up date. Do not count a public vacancy, referral, or request to email information as a qualified order.

A qualified order has a defined site, role, headcount, schedule, pay basis, start date, expected duration, screening requirements, safety/hazard profile, supervisor, time approval, invoicing/payment terms, vendor approval, and a bill rate that covers the agency's real costs.
